

By Nichola Groom

The Business Coalition for Fair Competition, a group opposed to the government competing with private businesses, said it would like to see a verification system to make sure the so-called repatriation work being done in prisons is not being taken away from American workers.

"There has to be some transparency," said John Palatiello, the group's president.

Read More....